

Valerie Sebesta currently works for the Oregon Education Association as a consultant in the Center for Teaching and Learning. Her current job responsibilities include serving as a liaison to the State Board of Education., providing a variety of state-sponsored trainings, and working with members, districts, and groups as a facilitator to deal with difficult personnel and organizational issues. Her areas of training specialty are communication skills, team building, and problem solving.

Valerie was an elementary education teacher, local association president, and staff person in New York prior to moving to Oregon 1997 to work for the Oregon Education Association. She has work on the design team and was the lead trainer for the National Education Associations' Collaborative Leadership training program and was also a national trainer for the NEA's Family School Community Partnership training.